DEER GOES ZOO KEEPER.

Objects to Leaving His Quarters to Join Other Animals.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—Victorious objections were made by two axis deer bucks and a male antelope in the menagerie in Central Park when keepers transferred them from their homes where they had been living alone to the quarters of leopards, lions and tigers. One of the rebellious bucks named Robert Hurton, a keeper, and tore off a part of his clothing, and the antelope hurled the men to the ground. Because the fallow deer buck was not well liked among the does it was planned to give him a stall alone and allow the oldest axis deer buck in the "Zoo" to take his place. The latter is large and powerful, and guarded angrily at William Snyder, keeper, when he entered his stall. Snyder fastened a rope about the nose of the deer and tied the other end to a bar of the stall after a short struggle. To prevent the buck from injuring the does, Snyder began to saw off his horns, while Hurton, Thomas Corcoran and other keepers stood around the animal and tried to force him to remain quiet. Snyder had finished sawing one of the horns off the buck when the latter turned suddenly and rushed with head down toward Hurton. Slack in the rope allowed the animal freedom and Hurton was thrown to the floor of the stall. His trousers were ripped by the horn of the buck and he received several bruises about his legs. During the effort to subdue the deer Philip Holmes, who has had charge of the animal, was knocked down and received injuries to one of his knees. It took almost an hour for the men to saw the deer's remaining horn and transfer him to the deer's quarters. When the keepers entered the home of the antelope he tried to attack them, but finally permitted himself to be led toward the paddock of the ewes. While the keepers were conducting him through the entrance of the paddock he charged on them and threw them to the ground. With less difficulty a young axis deer buck was taken from his quarters and placed among axis deer does.

Counterfeiters Are Sentenced.
REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.
Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Blaslaw Zambino, a Pole, convicted of counterfeiting by a jury in the United States District Court, was sentenced to seven years and six months in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Matthew Griffin, chief of the local branch of the Secret Service, testified that the man is an old offender, and that he had been caught trying to pass counterfeit silver dollars near Potomac, Swanton, Newburgh, who, it was shown worked with Zambino, was sentenced to four years and six months.

WEALTHY, BUT WILL TEACH.

Woman Who Inherits $625,000 to Continue Kindergarten.

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.
New York, Sept. 23.—Miss Lillian Radie Kilbourne, a former teacher in Harlem, who recently inherited $625,000, has not given up the idea of teaching. She has had a kindergarten in her home for the poor children of the neighborhood of One Hundred and Seventeenth street and Edgecombe avenue, and now announces that she will have a boarding-school established on the West 83d for children ranging from 2 to 16 years. Miss Kilbourne taught a year ago in Public School No. 4, and at one Hundred and Sixty-ninth street and Audubon avenue. Then her mother died, leaving her $625,000 in cash and the rest in real estate. She is a graduate of Grammar School No. 2, and of the State Normal School. Her brother, A. Radie, is a piano maker. Housecleaning? Consult Republic Want Ads for carpet cleaners, paper hangers, etc.
